Monthly statement

Macro Environment:

In May 2026, the U.S. stock market continued to strengthen despite geopolitical risks. The S&P 500 index rose by ~5% and reached a new all-time high, with technology stocks leading the gains (Nasdaq ~+8% month-over-month) on the back of an AI-driven earnings boom. At the same time, the macroeconomic backdrop became more tense: in April, annual inflation jumped to 3.8% (a 3-year high), mainly due to oil prices driven up by the war with Iran. At Chairman Powell's final meeting, the Fed left interest rates unchanged (3.5–3.75%), but an unprecedented four policymakers voted against the decision, signaling differences of opinion. Amid persistent inflationary pressures and uncertainty stemming from the conflict in the Middle East, the central bank signaled that no easing is expected in the near future. The labor market is cooling: "only" 115,000 new jobs were created in April, and the unemployment rate remained at 4.3%. Due to the energy price shock, the 10-year government bond yield jumped to around 4.65% (a 15-month high) in mid-May; by the end of the month, hopes for a de-escalation of the Iranian crisis pushed oil prices below $100, thereby easing inflation fears; This not only brought bond yields down but also supported the stock market's continued rise. We continue to maintain 100% currency hedging on our forint and euro-denominated holdings.

Changes in the fund:

During the month, we established positions in Bank of New York Mellon, UnitedHealth Group, Broadcom, Microsoft, as well as in Nvidia, which we closed out prior to this report. In addition, we overweighted the healthcare sector. We sold our exposures in small-cap companies and energy infrastructure. End-of-month equity allocation: 96.1%
